

A+ Science Newsletter

"The sky is not falling and life will return to normal."

Asa Don Brown

We hope everyone is doing well during those difficult times. Let us know if we can assist and support you with any of our services that we offer within the different phases of your clinical trials as well as pharmacovigilance services during clinical development and after marketing authorization. Our team is very flexible and can provide custom-made solutions just for your needs. We have the resources, knowledge and experience to offer cost-effective services and reduce costs associated with bringing new pharmaceuticals to market. All you need to do is to contact us and find out more.

The world is experiencing extremely uncertain times right now. The situation surrounding the COVID-19 has forced us take some hard decisions. We are closely following all the developments and continue to stand-by and work on projects our clients have entrusted us with.

At A+ Science we have been focusing on safeguarding the welfare and health of our employees, the staff of the investigational sites as well as the study subjects engaged in our trials. To limit exposure, some on-site clinical operations are reduced and most of our staff are equipped to work remotely. All necessary measures have been implemented in accordance with our local health authorities' guidelines and recommendations.

Even though and like everyone else we are currently navigating uncertain times we are confident that we will come back stronger and more resilient than ever.

Contact us at info@a-plusscience.com to find out about how A+ Science can help you conduct your clinical trial or offer you pharmacovigilance services. Our aim is to assist you in reaching your goals and objectives.

Earn Trust- Make Difference

LinkedIn

Instagram

Website

Twitter

YouTube