We hope that everyone has had an enjoyable summer and is loaded with lots of energy and vitamin D from this fantastic and sunny summer.

After a summer holiday slipping back into work mode can be a challenge. Being greeted by an overflowing inbox may cause you suffer from the back-to-work blues.

Just like a new backpack or a new pencil case can get children enthusiastic about going back to school, having something to look forward can help you feel excited about returning to work. Think about one thing that excites you about the work you do. Is there a specific project that you're looking forward to working with, or an opportunity to become involved in a new initiative?

Well we are back at work and excited to work with our current and new projects, it is exciting to work with new clients and projects which will hopefully change the lives of so many patients.

Margareta Gunolf and Angelika Kunnari, running an external presentation about Clinical Trials. This lecture was very much appreciated by the company and its staff, we received positive feedback from the delegates. Contact us if you wish to have such a presentation arranged by A+ Science.
